If there is anything in the idea it is worth passing along, for suitable birthday and Christmas gifts for men are so scarce that one can't afferd to disregard a single possibility. This woman has solved the problem of Christmas gifts for men by making the several masculine members of her family shaving towels of soft linen. Don't let any one which a woman uses, for the object of the towel is not to drape around the shoulders while shaving, but rather to use for the purpose for which a towel was originally designed after the shaving process has been completed. The towel is made of figured birdseye linen of a very fine quality. This can be purchased at the lines department of any large store. The towel is made a yard long with a half inch hem hemstitched in each end and a monogram embroidered in one corner an inch and a half above the hem. The softness of a towel of this kind seems to make it especially desirable for use after shaving.
